

Prof. Dr. Babette Simon is former Regional Vice President Medtronic Germany, served as Chief Medical Director and Chairwomen at the University Medical Center Mainz and is former President of the Carl von Ossietzky University Oldenburg. She is Professeur associé at the Faculty of Health, Université Paris Cité with a focus on Global Health.

She has wide national and international experience across the health system in non-private and private organizations with a strong focus on sustainability, innovation and value creation. Her expertise is sought after in numerous scientific committees. She is member of the University Council of the Technical University Dresden and the University of Applied Sciences Fulda, of the board of governors of the Helmholtz Centre for Ocean Research GEOMAR, the Scientific Advisory Board of the Private Excellence Initiative Johanna Quandt - Stiftung Charité and the Expert Advisory Group One Sustainable Health Forum.

Babette Simon served as a member of the scientific commission and the medical committee of the German Council of Science and Humanities, in the Senate of the Helmholtz Association of German Research Centers, in the Supervisory Boards of the University Hospital Düsseldorf and the TRON Translational Oncology Mainz gGmbH, the Technology & Start-up Centre Oldenburg, the Council of the Institute for Information Technology (OFFIS) and chaired the shareholder meeting Hearing Aid System Technology and the Scientific Advisory Board of the Ludwig-Boltzmann-Society.

Babette Simon's initial training was in human medicine at Freiburg University (D) and University Hospital Basel (CH). She earned her MD from Freiburg University and later a Master degree in Health Care Management from the University of Heidelberg/Mannheim. She completed a Research Fellowship in Molecular Biology at the MGH, Harvard Medical School with a focus on GI oncology and was trained in Internal Medicine with a specialization in Gastroenterology at the University Hospital Marburg. She is the author of numerous international and national publications, invited lectures, review and evaluation activities.